TRYING TO SAVE CLUVERIUS.

Hard Work to Save the Life of the Man who Committed the Most Shocking Deed Recorded in the Annals of Crime. Cluverius, who is to be executed January 14th for the murder of Miss Macison, has sent out circulars to members of the Virginia leg-islature, asking them to sign a petition to the out circulars to members of the Virginia legislature, asking them to slyn a petition to the Governor to grant him a reprieve until they neet. When the legislature meets Claverius hopes the members will recommend the Governor to commute his sentence to imprisonment for life. Cluverius friends are working with great energy to save him from his impending doom. It is probable that the Governor will be asked to grant him another respite in order to allow members of the legislature time to get this circular and consider to before the day now fixed for his execution. The discussion of Cluverius' case in the newspapers of the State shows that many of the most intelligent people in Virginia believe that the evidence adduced by the prosecution of the prisoner. This opinion seems to grow upon the people from day to day. Under the constitution it appears the Governor has no power to pardon a prisoner sentenced to death.

Dr. Woodrow and the Church.

It is now supposed that the Woodrow-Perkins Professorship controversy is ended by the final expulson of the Doctor from the chair, but sail to say, the Institution is ended also. It seems, therefore, to have been a Kilkenny cat fight. In our opinion, Dr. Woodrow erred in two particulars, (1) in giving to the students his opinion, that evolution was probably true, and (2) in rot retiring prometly when his course, was so evidently unsatisfactory to his church.—Wesleyan Christian Alevacte.
